

Keeping the Programs of MAJestic Secret

Somehow, over the years, it has become very important that the American government and (their) media subject the American people to all kinds of disinformation. This disinformation comes in different sizes, and shapes, and follows a great diversity of complexity and manipulation. It is quite mature, and actually perfected to handle the bulk of American citizenry.

Those of us in MAJestic have to live under this disinformation knowing full well that most everything that the government says or does is a lie.

The United States does not have a highly intelligent or well informed population. Americans believe that they are “great” because of their system of governance, but the truth is quite different. The US owes its 20th century dominance to World War I and World War II which destroyed more capable countries and peoples. America became a superpower because of the self-destruction of other countries.

Which pretty much continues to this day. The Trump MAGA belief is based upon the "suppression" of China using every means possible; A hybrid war. While the Obama policy was one of "containment" and "isolation".

In both cases, the technique employed was the destruction of another nation's ability rather than an improvement in American capability.

Even at that, only 6 percent of people say they have a lot of confidence in the media, putting the news industry about equal to Congress and well below the public's view of other institutions.

It is truly Orwellian in scope. What began as “politics as usual”, evolved in a highly elaborate and complex system that is used to deceive, and manipulate the American people. It is completely out of hand and getting worse with each day. “All your base are belong to us”.

“All your base are belong to us” is a broken English (“Engrish”) phrase found in the opening cutscene of the 1992 European release of the Mega Drive port of the 1989 arcade video game Zero Wing which became a popular Internet meme. The quote is included in the European version of the game, which features poor English translations of the original Japanese version.

This post discusses this all too distasteful subject.

It is necessary because MAJestic utilizes this system to control the American people so that they will be insulated and isolated from extraterrestrial interaction at all levels. This will never end; at least not until the <redacted> provide their approval.

"We'll know our disinformation program is complete when everything the American public believes is false."

-William Casey, CIA Director (from first staff meeting in 1981)

One of the greatest problems related to UFO and ET-related disclosures is disinformation. Everything is falsehood. Everything is lies. Everything is confused and complex.

No matter how cautiously one tries to seriously study the “extraterrestrial issue”, one will confront a bewildering array of confusion.

The American government today is a much smarter and craftier government than in the past. They have learned the lessons of disclosure and have taken every precaution to protect their own interests.

Indeed, they have hunkered down and hidden their nefarious acts and dastardly experiments under layers of secrecy, legalism and obfuscations.

They have become become wilier, more slippery, and more difficult to pin down. They have mastered the Orwellian art of Doublespeak and followed the Huxleyan blueprint for distraction and diversion.

Let the truth be told; the walls and traps that one encounters were laid there intentionally. They were put there on purpose. They were put there with pure intention. They are funded efforts. They consist of trained and conspired efforts.

To further complicate matters, it has become profitable to make money on the Internet. If the person can create a website that generated traffic (visitors) they can place advertisements on the website. As such, they can generate revenue. Thus, the generation of hoaxes becomes a profitable venture.

All this has a purpose.

Whether it is the government, or some young fellow in the basement of his parent's garage. The purpose is to fool you; the reader, the searcher, the investigator, and those interested in the most obscured of subjects.

In fact, these traps primarily consist of nothing less than tricks of disinformation and efforts of occlusion.

The researcher and enthusiast who wants to find the truth behind the mysteries will easily get lost in the static of an avalanche of garbage. They will find themselves (figuratively) buried underground, confronted by mazes upon mazes of pure unadulterated bullshit; pure and total nonsense.

Why is this so? Why, of all the subjects that one can research, why is the study of “observed activity that is suggestive of extraterrestrial life” so confused and convoluted? Why is it so? There has to be a reason. There really has to be. The reader should know; there actually is a reason for all of this.

It is important to keep the MAJestic organization secret. As time goes on, it becomes more and more evident for the necessity of this.

We have people in the highest levels of the United States government selling America off “lock, stock, and barrel” for personal profit. The head of the DOJ refused to prosecute the banks that tanked the USA economy so that he could be employed by them. Hillary Clinton sold top secrets for money, and 20% of the United States uranium for personal profit. Barrack Obama decimated much of the American cultural infrastructure for religious reasons.

There is a reason.

Yes, there is a reason. No, it is not because it is due to [1] the ignorance of Americans, [2] the lack of scientific education in American schools, [3] the American popular (POP) culture, or [4] poor eyesight, memories, or health of Americans. No. it is due to the American government itself.

The sole source of all of this, is not from the masses. It is not from any cultural misappropriation. Nope; it is actually from the United States government.

This is not happening in a vacuum. This has been occurring whilst other ongoing changes have been proceeding with storm-trooper precision. Many of the things that are happening this very moment have direct parallels in literature of the past. Whether it is an account such as the "Gulag Archipelago" by Solzhenitsyn or a work of "fiction" such as "1984" by George Orwell is irrelevant. Elements of the history or the storyline (regarding the former and the latter works) are now becoming thoroughly inculcated into the fabric of modern reality.

All of the measures taken by the Soviet Union to crush and control its population are beginning to manifest themselves today in the United States.

The courts are "stacked" to reflect the decision of the regime and not to rule by law. The Military Industrial Complex contracts are still being shuffled, along with government policies that just happen to substantiate those business interests with kickbacks for all. Laws serve political and corporate interests, and the lawmakers themselves do not represent any of their constituents: they are self-serving thieves, selling out their country and its populace for money and power.

The police departments have (for all intents and purposes) been "federalized," with budgets and marching orders becoming increasingly dependent upon federal and not local or state policies. Sheriffs who follow their appointed roles as duly-elected law enforcement officials upholding Constitutional guidelines are being "phased out" of existence. The changed demographics of "forced" insertions of illegal aliens and "refugees" into populations are rapidly negating the remainder of the two-party system to ensure that the Democratic party takes control as infinitum. Orwell envisioned it. His work is labeled a work of fiction, although all of the measures Oceania pursued are either currently in place in the United States or they're being developed.

There is mass surveillance, increasing by the day. The "internet of things," as coined by former General David Petraeus, is almost primed to allow "telescreens" to watch our every movement, and a camera on every corner to back them up. Orwell hated totalitarianism, having been exposed to it in his short but accomplished lifetime, and he knew man's propensity was to move toward the enslavement of his fellow man.

The development of new weapons by DARPA and the MIC are not toward a foreign enemy so much as the purpose of using them against the citizenry. Drones, robots, nanotechnology, and every other "gizmo" able to be employed are all being drawn from behind the black curtain to unleash upon the citizens.

Also, the world's situation is directly paralleling "1984" as three great spheres of influence...Europe, Asia, and North America...are being created by the powers that be. Global governance in "thirds" is probably the NWO end state, as outlined by Orwell for a very significant reason: control with as much ethnic and cultural homogeneity as possible. It stands to reason that an Oriental ("Eastasia," in "1984") empire/totalitarian state would control the Oriental nations, rather than split it up between populations that are not as closely related linguistically and culturally.

We are seeing those shifts of influence into the divisions outlined by Orwell now, as the nations jockey for position and power. Just as in "1984," where it stated that even two of the super-states in alignment and concerted efforts could not together topple the third, perhaps the same is with our world. The shift is toward totalitarianism, and the populations have been (and are being) conditioned to accept, if not embrace, collectivist thought and socialism.

A good example was a film called "the Mutant Chronicles," in which there were four great super-states that were organized not as nations but as corporations, that made war with one another over resources. We see the blending of government and corporation today in virtually every facet of life, with the illusion of elections and the illusion of choice upheld to keep the population around the dullard state of consciousness.

Due to a great number of reasons, and a history that would fill volumes, US-A-lead disinformation is a fundamental hurdle to overcome when trying to disclose any information related to UFO's, aliens and their technology.

If the reader or searcher wants to find out the story and the "reality" behind extraterrestrial life and their involvement with humans, they will have to confront the stone cold wall of disinformation.

It begins with a morass of fake news, fake photos, and stories that are incredulous. Then, they would have to confront the armies of debunkers. They would have to fight against the legions of "fact check" organizations, and their symbolic adjunct organizations.

The reader must make no mistake about this.

The entire disinformation effort originates out of the United States. In fact, the United States (shadow) government is the sole reason why there are no serious reports and open dialog concerning our known extraterres-trial relationships.

It does not originate out of China, France, or Germany. It does not have pale beginnings that emerged out of Brazil or Italy.

It is completely and firmly American. This is both in scope and extensive financial outlay.

"Obama has managed to put together the most intensive surveillance state in the history of the world. This is pretty frightening when you think about the implications."

-Oliver Stone

Today, things are not so simple. It is no longer an issue of which one "investigates" a given extraterrestrial sighting. No, it just is not that simple.

Instead, one must first FIND valid sightings, contacts, or disclosures.

You have to find the real issues and events. However, the United States government has made that issue extremely difficult. For the first line of information, disinformation is to flood real disclosures, and real observations, and real contacts under a torrent of nonsense; fabrications and pure lies and bullshit.

The searcher finds themselves overwhelmed with nonsense.

Aside from giving the illusion that any interest in this subject is lubricious, it also served to greatly increase the investigation efforts. For, to really investigate this subject now requires real and serious effort.

For various reasons, not only to control the masses, but through political correctness.

See

<http://www.dailywire.com/news/10555/how-political-medias-corruption-destroyed-americas-john-nolte#>

On his blog, Y Combinator president Sam Altman argued that political correctness was damaging the tech industry. "This is uncomfortable, but it's possible we have to allow people to say disparaging things about gay people if we want them to be able to say novel things about physics," he wrote. On the ground, the startup kings haven't changed their behavior. They're still pitching me their companies with the same all-out exuberance. They're continuing their quest to move fast and break things—regardless of what broken objects are left in their wake.

<https://www.wired.com/story/the-other-tech-bubble/>

Perhaps the greatest success story of the American disinformation campaign was to flood the public with the most outlandish stories regarding extraterrestrials.

In fact, the more outlandish the story; the better.

No longer satisfied to contently debunk a disclosure, they created a situation whereas the entire notion that there are extraterrestrials and that there is an active program concealing it would be considered preposterous.

Now, if one tries to conduct a serious spelunking into the world of extraterrestrial visitations and secretive American black-projects they encounter a mythical land comparable to 4CHAN in scope. This is INTENTIONAL.

4CHAN is an English-language image-board website. Users generally post anonymously, with the most recent posts appearing above the rest. 4chan is split into various boards with their own specific content and guidelines. Registration is not required, nor is it possible (except for staff).

Launched on October 1, 2003, its boards were originally used for posting pictures and discussing manga and anime, as the site was modeled on Japanese imageboards. The site quickly became popular and expanded, though much of 4chan's content still features otaku, anime, and other Japanese cultural influences. The site has been linked to Internet subcultures and activism and is known for its strange and outrageous pictures, subjects and content.

U.S. AIR FORCE AIRCRAFT IDENTIFICATION CHART

The great denial of extraterrestrially related aerial phenomena by the United States government has invoked a plethora of humor and more than a few snide remarks. In a world where everything can be explained away as being a realistic part of the official government policy statement, those making the pronouncements lose all credibility. They become pale shadows of nonsense and viewed with suspicion, even when they actually do tell the truth. Naturally they are joked about and made fun of. This is typical of the kind of humor that a person can find regarding this.

-Albert Einstein

In this (United States fabricated) land of confusion and disinformation, you will find [1] angels who appear to grant selected contactees specialized knowledge about the heavens. You will find [2] terrifying reptilian shaped creatures that can shape change and take over the identities of important political and business leaders. You will discover [3] time travel, [4] huge underground cities, [5] men dressed in black suits, and [6] all kinds of curiosities. (Not limited to rodents on Mars, mountain-sized statues, and Martian ghosts.)

I guess my story fits right in with the lot of them, and that is exactly the point. The overall purpose has been to make the truth swim in a stew of the ludicrous.

"The infrastructure needed to maintain and expand the level of secrecy which can deceive presidents and CIA Directors and senior congressional leaders and European Prime Ministers and the like is substantial - and illegal. Let me be clear, the entity which controls the UFO matter and its related technologies has more power than any single government in the world or any single identified world leader.

The current state-of-the-art in secrecy is a hybrid, quasi-government, quasi privatized operation which is international - and functions outside of the purview of any single agency or any single government. 'The Government' - as you and I and Thomas Jefferson may think of it - is really quite outside the loop.

Rather, a select, tightly controlled and compartmentalized 'black' or unacknowledged project controls these matters. Access is by inclusion alone and if you are not included, it does not matter if you are CIA Director, President, Chairman of Senate Foreign Relations or UN Secretary General, you simply will not know about or have access to these projects."

-Dr. Steven M. Greer, Understanding UFO Secrecy

Today we are living in a world in which a handful of high-tech companies, sometimes working hand-in-hand with governments, are not only monitoring much of our activity, but are also invisibly controlling more and more of what we think, feel, do and say.

Americans must be careful in what they say on line and on the phone. So-called harmless trigger words like cloud, pork and pirates could get a person in a great deal of trouble.

The Department of Homeland Security has an expansive list of keywords and phrases it uses to monitor social networking sites and online media for signs of terrorist or other threats.

While you'll definitely send up an alert for using phrases such as dirty bomb, Jihad and Agro terror, you're just as likely to get flagged for surveillance if you reference the terms SWAT, lockdown, police, cloud, food poisoning, pork, flu, Subway, smart, delays, cancelled, la familia, pirates, hurricane, forest fire, storm, flood, help, ice, snow, worm, warning or social media.

The technology that now surrounds us is not just a harmless toy; it has also made possible undetectable and untraceable manipulations of entire populations – manipulations that have no precedent in human history and that are currently well beyond the scope of existing regulations and laws.

The new hidden persuaders are bigger, bolder and badder than anything Vance Packard ever envisioned. If we choose to ignore this, we do so at our peril.

Those in control must control your behavior.

Disinformation, ridicule, and obfuscation are common tools utilized by the United States government to suppress disclosures. It is a fact of life.

As such, I would like to take a moment to address it.

America is a “Full-On” Police State

"They basically came to kill our family, they surrounded us with snipers. And then they wanted to lie about it all like none of it happened."

-Ammon Bundy

Imagine if all the secrets of the CIA were released to the public. Just imagine. Imagine that. Wow, wouldn't that be something? Wow!

Well, it happened.

Though, if all you watched was CNN, MSNBC, and Salon you wouldn't be aware of it.

Indeed, even Ron Paul, the prominent libertarian communicator and three-time US presidential candidate, decried his amazement of the release. WOW! In fact, he declared in early March 2017 in a Fox Business interview that it is "fantastic" that WikiLeaks revealed on Tuesday thousands of US Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) documents and files.

"Fantastic."

Speaking with host Kennedy, Ron Paul further stated that the information exposed "indicates that liberty is in big trouble" and states his concern about there having been insufficient media coverage of the information and outlines the potential dangers related to technology..

"Liberty is in BIG trouble."

I have to give pause and underline the concern of Ron Paul. Indeed, there is insufficient media coverage of the BIGGEST news of the century.

Why isn't the American media reporting that the most secret CIA files are being released to the public? Instead of reporting this major event, the news media are all focused on FBI Director James Comey and the investigation of Donald Trump ties to Russia. WTF? Why is the media keeping that news secret, and why are the "tech giants" assisting them?

The answer is obvious.

Paul's discussion raises the very crucial question "do we live in a police state?" As AntiWar's Justin Raimondo warns, the wikileaks revelations tell us the answer is 'Yes'.

It is insane to think that the United States government is a "police state".

I don't see any police preventing me from getting on board a airplane unless I don't have my papers. I don't see any police shooting unarmed civilians unless they feel threatened. There isn't any kind of branch of government that has it's own armed police force armed with military weapons that raid a house in the dead of night.

I just simply cannot believe that anyone would even consider this most crazy of thoughts.

The USA is the greatest nation in the world and our police work for us. It's not the other way around.

-Non-published comment on Metallicman

Well, we do have that.

Oh, they are not called the "SS". They are called the "IRS". Oh, the police do ask for your papers before you board a plane. It's the TSA that does it. The police actually does conduct "no knock" raids in the dead of night, often without proper Constitutional protections.

It's an exact carbon copy of time-honored Gestapo tactics. One just needs to be aware and knowledgeable of the substance of what the United States has become.

We just can't point our fingers at one particular President for this situation.

It has been building for a good solid 150 years. Though it certainly has accelerated under Presidents Bush and Obama. In fact, while we all were aware of what President Bush was up to, at least we had a reason for it. Under Obama there simply wasn't any pretense.

It was in-your-face third-world banana-republic leadership with but one objective; power and control. Indeed, many Americans were sick and tired of what American was turning into and voted Trump (a non-member of the political establishment) in as President in 2016.

"In your face". American idiom. Defiantly confrontational; also, an exclamation of contempt. Yup. That was President Obama for you. If you, the reader, wants to know what it was like under his Presidency it was this, and ONLY this.

"Third world". As in the style of.. underdeveloped or developing countries. As in The conditions in our poorest rural areas resemble those in the third world. This expression originated in the mid-1900s, at first denoting those countries in Asia and Africa that were not aligned with either the Communist bloc nations or the non-Communist Western nations. Because they were for the most part poor and underdeveloped, the term was transferred to all countries with those characteristics, and later still to poorer groups within a larger prevailing culture.

"Banana-republic" A small country, often led by a corrupt government, whose economy depends upon either one internally-produced commodity or the revenue generated by foreign companies or investors.

Which in 2020 hindsight looks like a colossal mistake.

Of course, to appreciate what it was like under Presidents Bush and Obama, one needs to think back to that particular time period. America became a police-state in laws, and in implementation of those laws. It became obvious to everyone...

"Fewer people visiting from abroad? Try not making legal visitors' experience of legally getting into the US like visiting a loved one at a SuperMax."

-The Alarmist Sudden Debt Dec 31, 2017 12:52 PM

The USA is a police state.

Use and abuse

The government creates narratives and events to control the American people. This is quite sophisticated and very well planned. You can well expect that nothing you see on the news is spontaneous. Nothing is spontaneous. It is all pre-planned events used to manipulate a dumbed down ignorant population.

The latest manipulation is the George Floyd video.

It's just as outrageous as all those high schoolers screaming and pleading for "gun control" or "climate change". It's the idea that you can suffocate a man in broad daylight, by sitting on his neck with your kneecap.

Maybe it's possible...

But it's certainly an odd way to die. It's almost like the American nation has become numb to the police shootings of people, and a graphic video needed to be recorded and presented...

... everything that you see or hear in American news should be suspect. It is all a manipulation of one type or the other.

The Vault 7 secrets

Anyways, getting back on to the disclosure of the CIA documents...

It is an amazing release of information. Pages and pages of super top secret information, all containing all the dirty and dark secrets of the CIA, are now public knowledge.

Indeed, WikiLeaks and Julian Assange could have gone down in history as the greatest enemies of government oppression of all kinds. However, their March 2017 release – a comprehensive exposé of the US intelligence community's cyberwar tools and techniques – is truly the capstone of their career.

Truly, given that this release – dubbed “Vault 7” – amounts to just one percent of the documents they intend to publish (one can only look forward to the coming days with a mixture of joyful anticipation and ominous fear.)

More is going to come. So why the fear? Fear because the power of the Deep State is even more forbidding – and seemingly invincible – than anyone knew. Joyful anticipation because, for the first time, it is dawning on the most unlikely people that we are, for all intents and purposes, living in a police state.

“A Police State.”

Yes, the USA is a Police State.

It is just as bad as North Korea. It is just as bad as 1960's Mao's Communist China. It is just as bad as the Soviet Union in 1970. It is just as bad as Iran. It is just as bad as Iraq under Hussian. Sure, we have MTV, Starbucks coffee, and ATM cash machines, but make no mistake, we live in a very tightly controlled police state.

The only difference between the Gestapo police state under the Nazi's is that today you sit inside of Starbucks and drink a Grande Carmel Cappuccino while you are being monitored. They don't need to sit in another table and watch you from behind a newspaper.

It saves on travel expenses, don't you know.

Scene from the Maltese Falcon.

They will visit you late at night.

They will bang on your door, and pour in with assault weapons armed and pointed at you. Instead of MP-40's they will point MP-5's at you. They will wear black, wear helmets, and have leather hobnailed boots. They will roll up in armored APC's and will kill you on sight if you have any evidence of defending yourself. The key interrogator might not be wearing a leather trench coat, but they will be wearing full body armor, and have holstered 9mm pistols.

Modern America resembles Nazi occupied territories during World War II.

Aside from the Hollywood “eye candy” and the Internet distraction of (mostly) free porn, America is perhaps the most advanced Police-State in the history of the world. The American government controls and monitors more people than ever, using the most advanced techniques ever devised. (Constantly improving and advancing.)

I was struck by this fact while watching an Internet video of Sean Hannity's show on FOX NEWS and listening to both Hannity and his guests, including the ultra-conservative Laura Ingraham, inveigh against the “Deep State.” For people like Hannity, Ingraham, and Newt Gingrich (of all people!) to be talking about the Surveillance State with fear (and outrage) in their voices says two things about our current predicament:

1. Due to the heroic efforts of Julian Assange in exposing the power and ruthlessness of the Deep State, the political landscape in this country is undergoing a major realignment. (This is forcing conservatives to return to their historic role as a defender of civil liberties.) You would think, but the “deep state” is filled with crusty old statist who have grown fat and content feeding at the trough.

2. American “liberalism”, which now champions the Deep State as the savior of the country, has become a toxic brew that is fundamentally totalitarian.

What we are seeing (as the role of the “intelligence community” in basically leading a seditious conspiracy against a sitting President), is a complete switch in the political polarities in this country. Indeed, what passes for the “left” has become the biggest advocate of the Surveillance State, and the populist right is coming to the obvious conclusion that we are a de facto police state.

In short, the “political left” are desirous of a full-on totalitarian police state.

Totalitarianism is a political system in which the state recognizes no limits to its authority and strives to regulate every aspect of public and private life wherever feasible. A distinctive feature of totalitarian governments is an "elaborate ideology, a set of ideas that gives meaning and direction to the whole society".

Totalitarianism is the most severe and extreme form of authoritarianism. The concept was first developed in the 1920s by the Weimar German jurist, and later Nazi academic, Carl Schmitt, and Italian fascists. Schmitt used the term, Totalstaat, in his influential work on the legal basis of an all-powerful state, The Concept of the Political (1927). The concept became prominent in Western political discourse as a concept that highlights similarities between Fascist states and the Soviet Union.

The “political right” is just being made aware of this with great alarm.

Ah, but wait! That's not the whole story. Please bear with me for a while.

The Material that outlines all this...

The material in "Vault 7" is extensive: it ranges from [1] examining the ways in which a Samsung television set that is seemingly turned off can be (and no doubt has been) used to spy on the conversations and activities of a room's occupants, to [2] the various ways in which our spooks infiltrate and subvert common electronic devices, such as the iPhone, in order to gather information.

"Infected phones, can be instructed to send the CIA the user's geolocation, audio and text communications as well as covertly activate the phone's camera and microphone."

The CIA has perfected a method of remotely controlling the electronic steering systems installed in cars. Which, I might add, is a perfect route to pulling off an assassination that looks like an "accident."

Not that the intelligence services of the “leader of the Free World” would ever consider such an act...

Right?

The massive infection of commonly used software and electronic devices leads to a major problem: proliferation.

As these viruses and other invasive programs are unleashed on an unsuspecting public, they fall into the hands of a variety of bad actors. Oh yes. It can range from foreign governments, criminals, to mere teenagers on a lark (not necessarily in descending order of malevolence).

This plague is being spread over the Internet by a veritable army of CIA-A hackers:

“By the end of 2016, the CIA’s hacking division, which formally falls under the agency’s Center for Cyber Intelligence (CCI), had over 5000

registered users and had produced more than a thousand hacking systems, trojans, viruses, and other 'weaponized' malware."

-Wikileaks

The inevitable end result is a world infected with so much malware that computers become almost useless. All of our great laborsaving convenient gadgets can become junk in a nanosecond. Moreover, this parlous condition is paid for by you, the American taxpayer.

One aspect of the Vault 7 data dump that's drawing particular attention is the CIA's Remote Devices Branch's "Umbrage group,". This is a group which, we are told,

"...collects and maintains a substantial library of attack techniques 'stolen' from malware produced in other states including the Russian Federation."

The idea is to mask the Agency's cyberwar operations by attempting to hide the unique forensic attributes of its techniques. The process of attribution, WikiLeaks explains, is

"analogous to finding the same distinctive knife wound on multiple separate murder victims. The unique wounding style creates suspicion that a single murderer is responsible. As soon one murder in the set is solved then the other murders also find likely attribution."

So how does the CIA hide its "fingerprints"?

It simply draws on computer code used by its adversaries (and not only Russia) and inserts it into its own handcrafted malware and other invasive programs, thus leaving Russian (or Chinese, or North Korean) fingerprints on the handiwork of CIA hackers. Indeed, The CIA has been involved in all kinds of nefarious activity, and has had the ability over the last decade or so, to blame the Russians or Chinese. Imagine that!

You see, the power that the United States government has is so absolutely complete that they can define what ever narrative they want for what ever reason. The evil can be treated like saints, and the downtrodden can be treated as dangerous criminals. Facts can be distorted into untruths, and lies can be twisted into reality.

And that is the case with many things that MAJestic has been involved in.

We have created a monster.

It is a Deep State with such unchecked power, armed with such Orwellian technology, that it represents a clear and present danger to our the United States, and all the citizens throughout the world. This threat is underscored not only by the WikiLeaks revelations, but also by the intelligence community's intervention in our American domestic politics, which has been documented in the headlines of the nation's newspapers for the entire first quarter of the Donald Trump Presidency.

This cancer has been allowed to grow, undiagnosed and unopposed, within the vitals of our government in the name of "national security."

Accelerated by our foreign policy of perpetual war, the national security bureaucracy has accumulated immense power, and our elected leaders have neglected to provide any oversight. Indeed, they are at its mercy.

Which brings up up to the issue at hand...

Keeping the MAJestic operations secret

You see, many people talk and complain about how powerful the enormous American government is. They (sort of) realize that the government can turn on you, or go after you if they need or want to. But people typically do not give it much more of a thought other than that. Most Americans are rather boring people, basically a non-threat, and lead a sheep-like existence. The idea that the United States government can turn on them, for what ever reason, seems remote, distant and unlikely.

Average Americans need not fear the United States government. As long as they behave in the proper prescribed manner, they will, for the most part, be left alone.

That is pretty much the situation for most Americans.

But what if the United States invested over a billion dollars in you. What if an expensive program, with new and exotic technologies, and an entire top secret apparatus was all part and parcel of who you are?

What then?

Ripley 8, also known as Number 8, was the eighth and first fully successful clone of Ellen Ripley created by the United Systems Military aboard the USM Auriga.

Although she was essentially no more than a by-product of the top-secret USM project to resurrect the Xenomorph XX121 species, the scientist in charge of the program, Dr. Wren, ultimately elected to keep her alive for study. Ripley 8 subsequently became involved in the Xenomorph outbreak and infestation aboard the Auriga.

While outwardly human, cross-contamination of DNA between Ripley 8 and the Xenomorph inside her endowed Ripley 8 with several Xenomorph attributes; essentially, she was neither human nor alien, but something in between.

Well...

Then it becomes a very serious, serious concern. That's what.

If you were part of a top secret experiment, one that cost billions of dollars, and so secret that only a handful of people actually knew your real past and what you had become, would not the government try everything in their power to monitor and control you so that you would not go “off the reservation”.

Indeed, they would be concerned.

And a government with just about every technique at their disposal would actually use it. Most especially when they notice that your behaviors are starting to go in strange and unexpected directions.

While Ripley 8 was a clone of Ellen Ripley, her personality was markedly different. Unlike the original Ripley, she was sarcastic, dry, and rarely fazed by the situations that she found herself in. Whether she be in USM captivity, subjected to scientific tests or faced with the horrors of a Xenomorph outbreak, she showed little emotional concern or interest and maintained an emotionless, apathetic exterior, such as when she informed Larry Purvis that he was infected with a Chestburster and calmly described the horrific, fatal birthing process to him.

Notably, Ripley 8's personality was split between the two species that contributed to her DNA, and she shared both human and Xenomorph sympathies. She often found herself to be in dissent regarding the two species' conflicting goals and aims, and at times even considered siding with the Xenomorphs aboard the Auriga (a desire the creatures apparently shared, they seem to revere her), although ultimately she chose to ally herself with the humans she encountered. Despite her fractured persona, elements of Ellen Ripley's character still shone through in Ripley 8.

They might decide to “terminate the entire program” no matter what the financial outlay was.

There are hundreds of thousands of people in MAJestic, but only a handful in my particular special program. Our uniqueness is important, and our role is equally so. However, the secrecy has created a situation where those that know of our true and real capabilities might misunderstand them, and interpret their utilization as a hostile act. In which case it would be very bad for us personally.

Conclusion

Thus, let it be well understood that those of us who are really part of MAJestic have a serious understanding of the way that things work, and have a healthy and righteous fear of those in power. For they are, in many ways, like children playing with a lighter and sticks of dynamite.

To them secrecy comes with a price tag, and the actual secrets are far less important than the monetary values assigned to it. The greater your assigned investment cost, the greater the importance in suppression of your presence.
