

Video snapshots of China; uncategorized, just some cool stuff.

As 2019 year of the pig is drawing to a close, and the 2020 year of the rat is starting to happen, I would like to post some videos of China that are just cool, interesting, or special in one way or the other. These videos are unsorted, and each one has a brief narrative describing what it's all about. Some involve heroes, like our good friend Rufus, while others are just WTF. Please, all these are just fun postings. Please kindly enjoy.

Video 1 – Child Labor in China.

You know, I have been working in manufacturing for decades, and I have hardly ever saw a child working in China. Though, if you believe the British media, it is commonplace. It's just another reason to bash the Chinese. Those dastardly bad Chinese...

Well, you can see children from time to time, working. They do so alongside their parents. They do so helping the family in the family business. And, I'll tell you what, when I see it, it makes me feel glad. For there is nothing better than spending time with your family and working together so the family flourishes.

Here's a video of child labor in China...

Video 2 – Traditional Family Life

In the next video, we have a son bringing his girlfriend to his father to introduce them. The father, being widowed, makes a meal for them. But it's pretty modest. The girl, looks it over, and shows her disapproval.

But you see, China is a traditional nation with traditional values...

So what does she do? She goes into the kitchen and cooks. She explains that she needs to take care of the family and do her part so that everyone can be healthy and happy.

Traditional families are not something out of the "Handmaids Tale", it's about roles and shared responsibilities. It's about respect and care and concern. It's not "every man fend for himself" that is the norm in America today.

Check it out...

Video 3 – The importance of mass transit

Mass transit can be found in almost all the major cities. This includes America, the EU, Russia and China. Where China differs from America, is that there are many levels of public transport. Often there are buses, rentals, scooters, trains, monorails, subways, and everything in between. The only thing missing are horses.

In the USA, mass transit is generally limited to buses (unless you are in a very big city).

This following video clearly shows, in a few seconds, why mass transit is preferable to privately owned automobiles in a Chinese city...

Video 4 – Girl proposes

In a traditional nation, everyone has roles. But China, being Chinese (of course), has traditions with “Chinese characteristics”. In the Chinese environment, the woman and the man both can reverse roles.

So instead of the man working and the woman staying home to tend the family, it can be reversed. Or, switched from time to time, or shared with shared responsibilities. It all depends on the family.

Here is a cute video. A girl proposes to the boy she wants to marry. I personally think that it is great.

Video 5 – Tough Chinese girl

Yeah, I have to admit that I love Chinese girls and women. I love the beauty, the intelligence, and the work ethic. I also greatly admire their toughness. They are like cats. They ain't afraid of shit.

Don't fuck with them.

Tough little girl.

Video 6 – Strangers rescue an infant locked inside a hot car.

We think that we can lock an infant inside a car, that it would be safe. Sure, it's hot and sunny out, but we left the engine running and the air conditioning on. You'll only be gone for twenty minutes... more or less. What could go wrong?

You could be delayed and the car can automatically shut off.

That's what.

Here we have strangers trying to rescue an infant from a steamy hot car... on a beach parking lot... in 100 degree weather. The baby is passed out and unresponsive.

What would you do? What would Rufus the hero do?

Rescue of an infant from a hot car.

Video 7 – Helping a woman under attack.

These stories of heroes and “Rufus” are my favorites, and I just cannot let a day go by without posting one or two of them. Here is another video. In this video a woman is under attack by a man. Lucky for her other men, all around her, come to her rescue and subdues the assailant.

You’d never see this in the United States, where it is customary to allow the crime to happen and you don’t get involved. Least you be sued by the person, or arrested by the police, not to mention fired from your job for bad behavior.

Watch these heroes spring into action...

Video 8 – This kid can’t drive fer shit!

Here’s a kind of funny video. This kid somehow thinks that the purpose of roads are to drive upon. So, what does he do? Well he hops on his little scooter and takes to the streets. In the process, he crashes into just about every car around. Yikes!

Can't drive for shit.

Video 9 – Beautiful Chinese girls.

Here's a video showing the ideal Chinese idea of beauty. Personally, I find all these ladies quite attractive. Now, aren't they just lovely?

Beautiful Chinese girls.

Video 10 – Uyghur Muslim arrested for killing Chinese school children in Xinjiang.

This video is very interesting, but it needs to be seen. This is an interview with an Uyghur Muslim in prison. He discusses why he killed and hurt others, and his expectations of going to live in paradise with seventy black-eyed virgins.

According to the American mainstream propaganda, and the alt-right propaganda machine, there are millions of Muslims in China under detention and unfairly arrested.

Well, it's a big ol' lie, and I have covered this elsewhere.

A Report on the Xinjiang and Uyghur re-education camps in China.

This article takes a comprehensive and serious look at the abuse of the Uyghur Muslims at the hands of the dastardly Chinese Communists. We look at who this group of people are, and their culture, and what is going on regarding their relationship with the Chinese central government in Beijing. We also take a good hard look at how they are being used as pawns in a global wide game of geopolitical politics.

One of the reasons why the Western press can get away with such lies is because the Chinese do not like to promote the violent acts. They believe that it should be kept hidden from the general populace. That is to day, it is the business of the government to protect the people from the acts of barbarism and savage behaviors of these individuals.

In 2019, the Chinese government began releasing some of the videos depicting why these people are in prison. This one in particular is very interesting. He's one of the men that the NED propaganda machine is promoting as an "innocent" Muslim that is unfairly locked up. China, in response, posted videos of his terror spree, and his confession.

Funny how the American (and British) media ignores the retort.

The individual shown in the video is one of the people that is trying to be released to America and claiming that the Chinese are being too brutal to him. Yea. Right. What about the brutality that he unleashed on the poor fella in the video?

As if the brutality that he did in the first few frames of the movie isn't brutal enough...

Uyghur Muslim in detention in China.

Yeah. That was awful.

Video 11 – Elephant rescues a downing man.

Meanwhile in Thailand, watch how this pachyderm comes to the rescue of a man being carried away by monsoon floodwaters. You go my large enormous friend! It's a feel-good video to make up for the nasty Uyghur Muslim business preceding it.

Elephant rescues a downing man.

Video 12 – Cute girls meets cute boy.

Life is too short not to spend some time on cute things. I like this video. It's cute and is a way for one girl to get a date for her girlfriend. Granted that it might not work every time, but in this video it works. And you know what? Maybe that's all that matters. Eh?

Cute match-up.

Video 13 – The “real deal” sings in a restaurant.

Imagine that you are minding your own business and enjoying a nice meal in Pizza Hut. Then sitting right next to you is a famous actor who comes up to you and starts talking. Like Robert De Niro or Tom Hanks. What would you do?

In China, many restaurants have a microphone where you can sing. So, if the mood strikes, a person can belt out one or two of their favorite songs. Actually, many times they are actually quite good. The Chinese view singing as a popular pastime and something worthy of doing.

Check out this video. It's the real deal you all.

Real Deal.

Video 14 – Rescue of a trapped cat

under the road.

Here we have a cat, or a cat with a litter of kittens that is trapped inside a narrow storm drain crevice. The entire community gets together to rescue the kitty. It's a great story and full of feel-good vibes. I hope you all like it and enjoy it as much as I have.

Save the kitty!

Video 15 – Happy CNY you all.

I am posting this post on Chinese New Years eve. That is 24JAN20. The year of the Pig is ending and it is going into the year of the rat. Already my family, my friends, my business colleagues are all eating these never-ending enormous banquets, drinking and quaffing enormous types of alcoholic beverages and passing out thick “red envelopes” of money to each other. It's a great time and very festive.

Fireworks are exploding all around the house to shake away and scare away the bad “unseen” spirits from affecting our life and future prospects. The kids are playing and having fun, and KTV parties are very common. Everyone is posing their fun on Wechat and Tictok, and it's a great time.

The only thing different this year is that the sickness outbreak in Wuhan has everyone wearing masks. Heck, even I wore a mask to the airport. LOL!

(They are sold out everywhere. Don't you know.)

Have a wonderful new year everyone. Let's have a great prosperous years, and great times with our friends and families! Meanwhile, this is what my CNY looks like...

Enjoy!

CNY KTV party.

I hope you all enjoyed this. Have a great and wonderful new year!
