

What is so special and great about the human race from an extraterrestrial point of view (part 1)

I haven't been posting too many "extraterrestrial" things lately. But, I've got some followers that live for this kind of stuff. So, in the interests of balance, I'm gonna post this article. And it will most probably anger the rest of my readership in the process.

Ahem...

Here goes...

If you were to have an ongoing conversation with an extraterrestrial, and ask them what they thought about the human race, and the human species, what would they say? What do you think they would say?

Well, here I am going to tell you.

Well, actually, I'm going to tell you (in my way) what one particular species thinks, anyways. I just can't speak for every species. Just those with whom I'm exposed to.

So...

Is it our culture? Is it our society? Is it our spirituality? Is it our technology? Is it our attractiveness? Is it our various religions? Is it our adaptability? Is it our kindness? What is it?

Nope.

None of the above.

It is our "human-ness".

What?

There are many species out in our universe (though I am only referring to those in our immediate vicinity) and they all have their own societies, and their own technologies, and their own histories, and all of that. What makes the human species "special" is our unique "human-ness".

What is "human-ness"?

A trait.

It's a trait that is very difficult to put into words because it is a comparative measure. It is not something that is recognized by us as having. It's something you see and appreciate when you compare humans to other species. We don't know it exists because we can't see it.

We are it.

If you compare species A, to species B, to species C, and then to humans, you will not help but to be amazed at our "human-ness".

Well...

Maybe "amazed" is not the right word. Perhaps a better one would be "pleased", or "pleasantly amused", or "comforted".

Human - ness

Now I am going to upset some people, but do not shoot the messenger. OK?

Don't shoot the messenger is an admonition to not blame the bearer of bad news. It is often used when someone reveals a difficult truth that the listener does not want to hear. It reminds the listener that the truth is not the fault of the person revealing the truth.

- grammarist.com

The best example that I know of that highlights and showcases our "human-ness" is the various shades of Japanese culture and society. I know this because of <redacted>.

And it occurred to me that perhaps there are others who might want to know about what makes humans so "unique".

Well, we are sort-of unique, because <redacted>.

It has been "thrown into my face" on numerous occasions by <redacted> that the Japanese have some really inherent attributes that highlight the human species. And while most of the world might think that the Japanese are bonkers crazy, they are not viewed as such by non-humans.

They are instead viewed as sublime.

Sublime;

"of such excellence, grandeur, or beauty as to inspire great admiration or awe."

In fact, the Japanese are probably (I am not too far out of line here) the most approachable culture of humans because of their saturation of human-ness qualities. This has been impressed to me numerous times, and on different occasions.

The Japanese culture and society is infused with “human-ness”.

I know that it is going to upset many people, but Americans are not high on the list of being appreciated or even understood by the extraterrestrials that I know of.

The Japanese are.

And while you might snort, and laugh, you all have to realize that there are many things that we humans have but do not appreciate or understand. The Japanese culture and society highlights these characteristics and enlarges them. And, well... “showcases” our “human-ness”

A descriptive video

The following is a video that (I personally believe) is filled with examples of what “human-ness” is and how it is used. The group is “World Order”, and the song is “have a nice day”.

I could have picked out any number of other videos.

I chose this one because it seems to have the widest range of “human-ness” related events that I have found. (I am sure that there are better candidates, but I don’t have all day, don’t you know.)

And yeah. I know.

It’s bat-shit, off the wall, bonkers nuts.

But, it displays our “human-ness”.

Here is a few embeds of Videos of world order have a nice day. I hope that they are able to play. I have put a few embeds as I don't know which one will work in your region.

Try YouTube first...

You tube

If you cannot access the embed on YouTube, then try metatube...

Metatube

```
<iframe
src='http://www.metatube.com/en/videos/229550/WORLD-ORDER-HAVE-A-NICE-DA
Y-OFFICIAL-MUSIC-VIDEO/embed/' width='750' height='390'></iframe>
```

Cat videos

You know how we like to watch “cat videos”?

Well, it’s sort of like that. When we watch cat videos we are admiring the cats being feline in all it’s glory. Well, it’s sort of like that. You might go as far as to say that the <redacted> like to watch Japanese Music Videos to enjoy our human-ness...

...except they do something different. But it’s like that. It really is.

Instead of videos, of course, they <redacted>.

The attributes

In the above video is at least 35 scenes or elements of “human-ness”. Can you identify what they are? Can you see why they would be appreciated by another species?

Or maybe you can't.

If you think that the Japanese are too off the wall, and not “with the program” then I am not making myself clear. The qualities that make us human; our human-ness is our relationships with others and how we interface with the universe within our reality.

Watch the video again, if you still “don't get it”.

Pay attention to the interactions between the individuals, both singular and in groups. Note the interaction of the groups of people with things and items. These characteristics define our human-ness.

Like anything... it is our relationships with others, and our actions and thoughts that define our sentience. That is what makes us attractive.

Do you want some more?

I have more posts about extraterrestrials in my extraterrestrial index here...